

Lorenzo Ghiglieri, bronze sculptor

Lorenzo has lived the lonely life of a frontiersman with trappers and men of the mountains. The North American wildlife and American West series of limited edition of bronze sculptures expresses Lorenzo's exciting and dramatic knowledge, created from his energy. He has trapped in the mountains, hunted in the Yukon and fished the white water of many western rivers. Each sculpture, each painting that emerges from Lorenzo's studio is a documentation of personal experience that makes a statement of wild beauty, glowing with vitality, hinting at immortality. Step into the past and surround your emotions with the beauty of Lorenzo's sensitive and enduring message.

World renowned Oregon artist and sculptor, Lorenzo Ghiglieri, has creations gracing the most prestigious museums and art collections around the world. The White House, Vatican, Kremlin and Royal Palace in Madrid are just a few. His sculptures and paintings presented to Ronald Reagan, Al Gore, Mikhail Gorbachev, Pope Paul II, Queen Elizabeth, Michael Jackson and Luciano Pavarotti.

Lorenzo was the son of an Italian sculptor and a French artist mother. He grew up in a world of ethnic blends that enriched his understanding of world culture. After receiving formal art training, Lorenzo went forward on his own to study the Old Masters. At the age of 17 he was awarded a prestigious art scholarship, at 20 he was working on national accounts and by 22 was commissioned to paint what became a gift from the United States to Great Britain for Queen Elizabeth's coronation.
